COOKIE POLICY

Cookies are text files containing minimum information sent to the browser and stored on your computer, mobile phone or other device, every time you visit a website. Every time you access the website, the cookies refer information to such website.
Cookies can be permanent (persistent cookies) if they remain on the computer until the user deletes them, or temporary (session cookies) if they are deactivated when the browser is closed.
Cookies can also be "first-party cookies" (if set by the visited website), or "third-party cookies" if sot from a website other than the one visited.

How we use cookies:
We use cookies to improve the functionality of our website, allow the user to move easily between pages, remember his/her preferences and to ensure the user always optimal browsing experience.

Cookies used and their purpose:
The cookies used on our website can be classified as follows (see the cookie guide by the ICC, International Chamber of Commerce):

Essential cookies:
These cookies are essential to allow the user to move around the website and use the required services, such as access to protected/restricted areas of the website.

The essential cookies are first-party cookies and can be permanent or temporary. We use this type of cookies to manage the registration and access phase of users. Without these cookies the user could not access the requested services and our website would not work properly.

Performance cookies:
Performance cookies collect information on the use of a website by users, such as which pages are visited most frequently. These cookies do not store identification data of individual visitors, but only aggregate and anonymous data.

We use these cookies for:
- statistical purposes, to understand how our website is used
- measure the distribution of our advertising campaigns.

These cookies can be permanent or temporary, first or third parties. In essence, these cookies collect anonymous information on the pages visited and the advertisements displayed.

Advertising cookies:

MY GOVERNANCE

These cookies are used to limit the views of an advertisement by the user and to monitor the distribution of advertising campaigns.

Advertising cookies are used to manage advertising on the site.

Advertising cookies are placed by third parties, such as advertisers and their agents and may be permanent or temporary. In practice, these are cookies related to advertising services provided by third parties on our site.

Other third-party cookies On some pages of our site there may be content of services such as YouTube or Facebook. We do not control the cookies used by those services, so we invite the user to access the site of those third parties for the appropriate information.

To limit, block or delete cookies, you can simply change the settings of your web browser. The procedure varies slightly from the type of browser used. For detailed instructions, click on the link of your browser.
